

Shadows of Doubt

By Mell Corcoran

Softcover: $16.95
ISBN: 978-1-935204-78-7
440 pages
Publication Date: March 19, 2013

www.mellcorcoran.com
www.facebook.com/MellCorcoran

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

THE HUNTER BECOMES PREY IN WICKED GOOD CRIME THRILLER

LOS ANGELES, Calif., January 20, 2013 — Have you ever been in far too deep to turn away?

Humans sit comfortably at the summit of the food chain; rarely does any other animal get the advantage. But other people? Now there's something to fear. In Mell Corcoran's thrilling crime novel debut, Shadows of Doubt, women are being hunted, tortured, killed and their assailant leaves the same clue on each of them but it has no scientific explanation. Detective Lou Donovan must figure out this killer's signature because he's escalating and no one knows where he will strike next.

When the first victim appears in Shadows of Doubt, neither Lou nor her partner wants the case but it's dropped in their laps. As soon as they make some progress, however, the case is taken from them and the explanation is weak at best. Lou won't let go and tries to work below the radar but she's foiled at every turn. It's as if someone is watching her and knows her every move.

Shadows of Doubt is an exciting ride. It has everything a good crime book needs: a fiery detective with a blood hound's sense, dark figures with dark pasts, twists, turns, and action. And then there's the tall, gorgeous man. Lou and this mysterious stranger keep crossing paths and his presence disarms her. What she doesn't know is that her effect on him is the same and therein lies the rub. If he can't think straight, Lou will die.

About the author

Mell Corcoran, a Southern California native, is a writer and animal enthusiast. She currently lives in Los Angeles, CA. Her formal education and professional background is rooted in law, her lifelong passion for literature has become her first love.

Media Contact:

Ashley Olson
ashley.olson@MillCityPress.com
612-455-2293 ext. 210